OBITUARY.

Be still prepared for death and death or life shall thereby be the sweeter.—Shakespeare.

Quick as a flash went out the life of aged George Stevens on Saturday, Nov. 16, 1907, by his own hand, exploding a stick of dynamite with a fuse and cap, with the express purpose of ending his existence.

Mr. Stevens and wife had been living with a daughter, Mrs. Alfred Goheen, upon the farm near Yale for the past two years, and infirmities caused from old age had made him despondent, and although perfectly rational and clear of mind he had several times declared he would take his own life rather than be a burden in his old age.

The shocking death of deceased was a very startling thing to the family, and also inexplicable sad.

The funeral services were held from the Speaker church Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 19, 1907, Rev. Ostrander preaching the sermon. Burial took place in Speaker cemetery.

Card of Thanks—We are sincerely grateful to our many friends who came in our hour of trouble, performing so many acts of kindness.

Alfred Goheen and family.

The remains of Dallas M. Clark were brought to Yale Wednesday morning of this week from Saginaw and funeral services were held at the People's Temple by Rev. Ostrander, pastor. Interment was made in Elmwood cemetery beside a daughter.

Dallas M. Clark was born in Vermont in 1849 and came to Michigan with his parents one year later, they settling in Berlin, St. Clair county. He passed his young manhood days in different parts of the county, living for a time near Brockway Centre. Then he went to Tennessee where he was married. Later returning, he lived on several farms in this vicinity, and at one time in the village. In 1901 he moved to Saginaw where his family now lives. He died in the hospital from dropsy on Friday, November 15, 1907, at the age of sixty years. He leaves a wife and four children, besides a sister and three brothers, one being Elder Lester Clark, of Yale.

Deceased will be remembered by many in this vicinity.

Herb Welch, of whose attempted suicide The Expressor mentioned last week, died at the county hospital, Los Angeles, Calif., on Wednesday, Nov. 13th, 1907, and was buried in that city on the following Friday.

Herb was the youngest son of Anthony Welch of this place. He was born in Yale 22 years ago and lived in Yale all his life until about seven years ago when he went west to make his fortune. From all reports he was getting along nicely, and it was with surprise that his many friends here received the news of his rash act.

Besides an aged father he leaves four brothers and two sisters to mourn his untimely death.

TWENTY-FIFTH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

We clip the following interesting paragraph from the Flushing Observer. The article will explain itself. Mr. and Mrs. Ellis have hosts of friends in Yale who congratulate them upon the pleasant manner in which their anniversary has been very successfully planned by several of the ladies in the church. A short musical program was rendered and refreshments were served after which R. D. Briggs acting as toastmaster called for remarks from members of the several departments of the church and the other village pastors present all of whom paid tribute to Mr. and Mrs. Ellis and their work here. Mr. Ellis responded in a pleasing manner. Mr. Briggs then in behalf of the company presented them with a substantial purse of silver as an expression of esteem and to serve as a memento of the occasion.

YALE BANKS NEVER REFUSED.

The flurry that struck the financial world some few weeks ago, due to the shortage of cash and lack of confidence in, thanks to American grit, wearing off, and the business of the country is again flowing through its normal channels. The peculiar thing about the disorder was that it afflicted almost exclusively the larger centers, while the smaller institutions pursued the even tenor of their ways as though nothing had happened.

But of course there are persons in all towns who are looking for something to say, be it good or bad, and some such irresponsible nonentity in Yale spread the rumor that a certain bank had refused to cash checks, when as a matter of fact our local institutions never for a moment thought of suspending payment.

Being naturally interested a representative of The Expressor during the past week has been investigating the local situation and interviewing local bankers, and truth to say they feel it keenly that anyone would maliciously circulate such rumors with the idea of hurting the business of the city. Cashier Learmont of the Yale State Bank says the stories are fabrications, and that his bank has never refused to pay checks and points with pride to the reputation for promptness enjoyed by his bank.

To show the solidity of Yale banks, the case of C. J. Roberts, the poultry man, might with profit be cited. Mr. Roberts has been buying poultry in different towns throughout the Thumb, but outside of Yale he was tied up, owing to banks suspending payment, but here in Yale every check drawn on the First National Bank was cashed promptly and to the amount of over $1,500.

When we look at the amount of business done here week in and week out, why if the banks suspended, every factory would be compelled to close. The Canning Factory with its 8800 semi-monthly payroll and the Woolen Mills with its $140 payroll, have paid their help by check each time, and they were honored too.

No, the people of Yale have no reason to question the stability of either bank, but are to be congratulated on possessing two institutions that can take care of business when nearby banks are tottering on a fall, take care of all regular business and the extra business that comes with a partial "spiking" of outside banks. It requires something more than reputation, it requires cash, and Yale banks during all the years of successful business in the city have never lacked that necessary commodity. Therefore do not knock your city or say that the banks are not paying checks until they turn down one of your own. Don't go on hearsay evidence, get it first-hand.

Destroys Hair Germs

Recent discoveries have shown that falling hair is caused by germs at the roots of the hair. Therefore, to stop falling hair, you must first completely destroy these germs. Ayer's Hair Vigor, new improved formula, will certainly do this. Then leave the rest to nature.

Does not change the color of the hair.

Recent discoveries have also proved that dandruff is caused by germs on the scalp. Therefore, to cure dandruff, the first thing to do is to completely destroy these dandruff germs. Here, the same Ayer's Hair Vigor will give the same splendid results.

Yale, Mich.

My Dear Sir:—We regret very much to inform you that Col. Ham is a very sick man. He is suffering from an acute attack of rheumatism and asthma. He was only able to fill two dates last week and came to Chicago to consult with a physician. The physician states that Col. Ham is in very bad shape and it will be absolutely impossible for him to fill any lecture engagements for several weeks and insists that he go home immediately so as to have the care of his family physician.

Yours very truly,

Fred C. Pelham.
